

NO LONGER

The NLE Curatorial Lab (NLE Lab) is a socially conscious professional development program for emerging curators and cultural workers interested in direct experience curating in an expanded field. Expanding on No Longer Empty's mission to curate site-responsive and community-centered exhibitions and programs in unique spaces, NLE Lab focuses on research, project-based learning and collaboration. The program includes a curriculum of critical readings, guest speakers, site/historical research, and studio/exhibition visits, culminating in a collectively curated exhibition with related programming. NLE Lab incorporates community engagement as a fundamental component in the formation of curatorial themes.

Divided into two phases (curriculum and exhibition), the NLE Lab program consists of seven key components:

- 1) Fundamentals of curatorial and site-specific practices from interdisciplinary position(s)
- 2) Site, historical, and community-based research and outreach
- 3) Development of exhibition theme, artist selection and programming
- 4) Exhibition planning, budget and design
- 5) Exhibition management, promotion and press
- 6) Advancement and visibility of curators
- 7) Exhibition evaluation and impact assessment

The 2019 NLE Lab is partnering with NYC Health + Hospital Kings County in East Flatbush, Brooklyn, to support curators, community artists and members in creating experiences that explore the critical role that art plays in the wellness of a community. The 2019 NLE Lab is part of a three-year relationship with NYC Health + Hospital Kings County, a partnership that seeks to emphasize the role of creativity within the provision of health services through ongoing programs and youth education, artist residency programs, and exhibitions on and in the vicinity of Kings County Hospital's 40-acre campus.
